

Ford Station Wagons

From the Wagonmaster

Ford Wagons. A way of life for over four generations of Americans. Ever since we introduced the 1929 Model A "Woody," America's first mass-produced station wagon, our aim has always been to make Ford Wagons quality products that are functional, inexpensive to run and just plain good to look at. 1976 is no exception.

Ford is the wagonmaster. That's why when America has something to carry, America comes to Ford.

Four sizes for 1976: Pinto • Torino • Ford LTD • Club Wagon

Pinto Wagon Outsells them all, big or small

That's because you get a lot of wagon in our little Pinto Wagon. It's strong and rugged for its size, and comes with a surprising list of standard equipment. Things like sporty bucket seats, carpeting (even on load floor), thrifty 2.3 liter 4-cylinder engine, 4-speed manual floor shift, precise rack and pinion steering, solid state ignition and a whole lot more (see "Notable Standard Features," p. 3).

And Pinto has the same number of Ford Lifeguard Design Safety Features found in our bigger Ford Wagons: reinforced roof structure, steel guard rails in side doors, impact-absorbing bumpers, dual hydraulic brake system with front disc brakes, just to name a few.

Naturally, Pinto Wagon gives you the kind of convenience and usefulness Ford Wagons are so famous for. It has an easy-lifting rear gate that opens to over 57 cu. ft. of cargo space with second seat down. Flip up the seat and there's ample seating room for 4 adults—and you still have over 3 feet of load deck at rear! Best of all, this is the same Ford Pinto that's so simple to drive and park, so easy on gas, oil and repairs.

For '76, Pinto Wagon offers fresh new front end treatment, new colors, new interior decors and new options (see back cover). Several dress-up packages are available, including the Squire Option shown below, and Luxury Decor Group on page 3.

Ford means value. The closer you look, the easier it is to see why Pinto has been the best-selling station wagon in the country—big or small.

Pinto Wagon with Squire Option, shown below, gives you Ford's classic "Squire" look, Pinto's famous frugal ways! Comes with woodgrain vinyl body paneling, Squire script, bright window frames, belt moldings and more. Red (2R).
